How can Italy reshape national energy security?
As part of its broader efforts to reshape national energy security, Italy has set out four key conditions for solar systems with a capacity of 1MW or more that are seeking subsidies. These systems must use solar modules, solar cells and inverters that are not of Chinese origin, and at least one other core component must also be non-Chinese.

What does Italy's new 'preferential treatment' mean for non-Chinese solar projects?
